On February 28th, educators and allies from across North America will stand in solidarity with transgender students by hosting school and community readings of I Am Jazz, a children's book by author and inspiration, Jazz Jennings. This event is intended to foster safe and welcoming schools and communities for young people. Your participation sends a powerful message to transgender and gender diverse students that they are seen, affirmed and valued.

I Am Jazz, written by HRC Foundation Youth Ambassador Jazz Jennings and author Jessica Herthel, is the first-person account about being transgender. Jennings was one of the first openly transgender children to talk publicly about her identity and the challenges she has faced as a transgender youth. Gender Inclusive books like this one will help young children understand transgender and gender diverse youth and adults.
